

PROGETTO ESECUTIVO

This architectural drawing shows the facade of the Church of the Holy Spirit in Prague. The drawing is oriented vertically, with the church's entrance at the top. The central feature is a tall, ornate clock tower with a large clock face. To the left of the tower is a smaller, rounded structure with a dome. To the right is a long, rectangular section of the church facade with several windows. The drawing is a line drawing with some shading to indicate depth and texture.

This architectural section drawing illustrates a cross-section of a building's exterior wall and roofline. The drawing includes several rooms and structural details. On the left, there is a large room with a vaulted ceiling, labeled with a height of 7'0". To its right is another room with a height of 6'0". Further right, a smaller room contains a window with a decorative arch above it, labeled with a height of 8'0". Below this, a staircase is shown with a height of 4'0". The drawing also features various structural elements like columns, beams, and floor slabs, all dimensioned in feet and inches. A red hatched area on the far right indicates an excavation or foundation detail. The overall style is technical and precise, typical of architectural blueprints.
